Down Or Up? The prices of foodstuffs have gone up because the cost of production has increased and because there were far too little to satisfy the existing demand. Neither of these conditions is going to be remedied by rolling back the prices to consumers. This is only going to make the money in the pockets of the consumers go further at the expense of the taxpayer by which they may increase their demands for food. Connecticut Economic Council.

A Pioneer Retires The Portland Oregonian recently ran an editorial on the retirement of Charles S. Woolworth, who for six-and-a-half years has been associated with the F. W. Woolworth Company, founded by his brother, the late Frank W. Woolworth. The intent of the article was not merely to felicitate Mr. Woolworth, but to point out that the "five-and-ten" had been an answer to an economic need of common folk with but a few small coins to spend at a time. The Woolworths did much more than start a unique commercial enterprise. They were pioneers in a method of merchandising which sought to supply the masses with gadgets and necessities and personal accessories and objects to beautify the most humble home at trifling prices.

Following the Woolworth success came other stores in the wearing apparel and grocery fields—stores that depended for their existence on supplying necessities and smaller necessities for the ordinary citizens on a mass turnover basis at a minimum unit profit. As a result, in the United States has been developed the outstanding retail distribution system in the world, where customers in the smaller towns over a nation of three million square miles of territory can get virtually the same goods at the same price as do residents of larger cities. It is well to give credit to a man who has helped build up such a system of better living, while he can still appreciate it.

In concluding his comment, the Oregonian said: "One realizes that to say these things is to run the risk of censure, of being suspect of publishing a free advertisement, but—heaven bless your capacious old heart!—there are honors and plaudits enough for all in the American merchandising scene. . . . There are multitudes of Americans who would testify . . . that life is better for them than it might have been had not the 'five-and-ten' become a national institution."

The Truth Hurts No one can deny the shameful fact that after two years of war the civilian population of this nation has done little to deserve victory. It is sheer hypocrisy to point to our arms production, evidence of a will to win. Every gun and plane that has rolled off the assembly lines was built on a strictly commercial basis. Not a rivet has been driven for love of country alone—the labor leaders and vote seekers have seen to that. Rarely has a politician made an utterance uncolored by a desire for personal advancement. Even our bond campaigns have not impinged upon the scramble for easier living. It has been boldly stated that the war must not interfere with social gains. War revenue has been sought without pinching the voter, even to the extent of undermining long range industrial stability and postwar jobs. The accent at home has been on security and comfort, while millions of American boys have for two years been fighting the ugliest war in history.

At last Wendell Willkie, who, like millions of other Americans, is sick of the home front attitude, has made a speech that the country needed to hear as much as it needed to hear the denunciation of strikes, credited to General Marshall. One need not agree with Mr. Willkie politically, or fully support his recommendation for a sixteen-billion-dollar tax increase, to appreciate the cold logic of his statement that: "Beyond the precautions necessary to preserve our effective manpower and womanpower and the industrial structure by which they live, every other dollar in every income group, corporate and individual, must be taxed and, and ruthlessly taxed, for the preservation of the American future."

... We have not done this. We are not doing it. And neither Congress nor the Administration expresses any intention of doing it. . . .

"What shall we say to men who have faced . . . the hazards of war, if we have coddled ourselves at their eventual expense, by clinging to the living standards of peace?"

... While I sincerely believe that the people will accept these burdens if the issues are made clear, I know that they will at the same time demand an economy in government of a severity equal to their sacrifices."

An all-out emergency wartime tax program can work on but one condition—a non-political administration of non-political tax laws aimed at inspiring individual effort through patriotism rather than profit. If pressure groups are permitted to escape their share of taxes or are granted wage and price boosts to offset these taxes, inflation will come as surely as night follows day. As the war-winning peacetime political tax system must be changed to meet war conditions, and the people must make heroic tax payments to hold down the war debt, or the country will have forfeit-

It looks as if the Everglades Theatre is slated for a full week of action drama with Western pictures predominating. With the Owl Show, Saturday and the Sunday-Monday run comes Claire Trevor, Albert Dekker, Barry Sullivan, Henry Hull and Porter Hall in "The Woman of the Town", which is definitely a Western show. In this one Dekker gets romantic and goes for the "one woman in the world" which happens to be "The Woman of the Town". Tuesday-Wednesday far-sighted producers have chosen the recently completed Alaskan Highway as their locale for the story "Alaska Highway", which stars Richard Arlen, Jean Parker and Joe Sawyer. This one is all action. Thursday-Friday brings back one of the best Western pictures of achievement Mr. Willkie's conclusion that: "After services, the taking of risks, the creation of millions of jobs, taxes must be minimized rather than maximized. We must solve the postwar tax problem, not by imposing the biggest possible rates on our income, but by creating the biggest possible income on which to impose relatively modest rates."

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS... "Judge, would you mind tellin' Charlie here what you told me the other night walkin' home from lodge. I can't work it just the way you did." "Sure thing, Tim. Here's what I told him, Charlie. There's no such thing as votin' a nation, a state, a county, or even a community dry. We had poor enough of that during our 13 years of prohibition. What you really vote for is whether liquor is going to be sold legally or illegally... whether the community is going to get needed taxes for schools, hospitals, and the like, or whether this money is going to go to gangsters and bootleggers. That's the answer, boys... simple as A-B-C."
